Affluence Austerity And Electoral Change

Affluence, Austerity and Electoral Change in Britain investigates the political economy of party support for British political parties since Tony Blair led New Labour to power in 1997.

Affluence, austerity and electoral change in Britain ...

The core thesis of Affluence, Austerity and Electoral Change in Britain is that Britain's recent general elections have been decided by "valence factors" - that is ones where voters choose between parties based on evaluation of their competence rather than making choices based on competing ideologies. Voters evaluate competency and credibility rather than competing lists of policy options.

How voters decide who to vote for: Affluence, Austerity
